Mr. Rallis was scheduled to hold his final Cabinet meeting at noon Monday before handing in his res-ignation to President Constantine Caramanhis. As the first results came in, thousands of jubilant Socialist Movement supporters celebrated in the streets. Carrying party flags - green with a rising sum emblem - they sounded car horns and raced around the city center shouting "Papandreou, Papandreon." Mr. Papandreou, 62, has cam-

Moderate General Is Not Expected To Bring Abrupt Policy Reversals

By John Damton

New York Times Service WARSAW — Stanislaw Kania, the Communist leader who gained the Communist leader who gamed power at the height of labor unrest 13 and a half months ago, was dis-missed Sunday and replaced by his premier, Gen. Wojcjech Jaruzelski. Gen. Jaruzelski is widely said to share Mr. Kania's moderate ap-proach — in particular a belief in the necessity of poliocal accommo-dation with the Solidarity independent trade union — so no abrupt attempt to reverse the liber-alizing changes in the country's pobtical life was expected.

But the Central Committee, which accepted Mr. Kania's resignation in the third day of a stormy session, demanded stronger action to overcome the economic crisis and a tougher line against "antiwho are not against Socialism." But it also called for renegotiating the agreements signed with striking workers last summer, a resumption of the six-day work week, and a "temporary" suspension of the right to strike.

The ouster of Mr. Kania, 54, the party apparatchik who replaced Edward Gierek on Sept. 6, 1980, followed months of deteriorating economic conditions, with food in-creasingly scarce, long lines at shops and a dwindling supply of gasoline. Western diplomats and Polish observers said they felt that Gen. Jaruzelski was an ideal choice as successor. He is moderate and yet acceptable to the Soviet Union, Solidarity and most of the Polish people.

Not an Activist

The 58-year-old career officer probably owes his selection to his military uniform more than anything else. He became premier in February and has not been an acovist head of government.

Poland has not had a military leader since the interwar dictator-ship of Marshal Jozef Pilsudski. Nowhere else in the Communist states of Eastern Europe does a military officer serve as a party leader, since Communist parties traditionally keep military combefore the Central Committee

YORKTOWN, Va. - The battle was over. The dead and wounded had brushed themselves off and the white smoke from a hundred black powder muskets had disappeared into a cloudless sky. The soldiers were back in camp, drinking grog from tin cups and grombling in traditional foot-soldier fashion.

"The whole thing was a sham," said Ron Ma-clamis, one of 3,000 citizen soldiers who volunteered for the four-day re-enactment of the American victory at Yorktown 200 years ago. A New England engineer portraying an elegantly utilionned officer, Ma-clanis was standing among a group of other men upset that the National Park Service had kept the spectators so far away. Devotees of U.S. history who made the pilgrimage to the small town on the York River do not have to be told the importance of Yorktown. Most Americans may have celebrated the birth of their nation five years ago during the Bicentennial, but if it was born in 1776, it was baptized in blood at Yorktown in 1781. That is when the revolution was won. In Yorktown, Lord Cornwallis and his 7,500 British troops were trapped, then captured by a com-bined American and French force. Considering the condition of George Washington's army at the time — barefoot, bedraggied and deserting in droves — the war might well have been lost without this victo-ry, and without the help of the French.

We are at the end of our tether, and now or never deliverance must come," wrote Washington in a let-ter to the French government, asking for more aid a few months before the Yorktown battle.

Meanwhile, Washington and the French general Jean-Baptiste de Vimeur, comte de Rochambeau, had completed a forced march from New York to York-town and surrounder the British. On Oct. 9, the allied forces began a weeklong bombardment of York-town and its British inhabitants.

On Oct. 17, with the British starving and suffering from an outbreak of smallpox, Cornwallis sent a lone drummer boy over his battlements to call for a parley. Two days later, the Britisb troops - one-quarter of their army in America - marched out of York-town to the old British tune "The World Turned Upside Down," and surrendered.

There were fewer than 200 fatalities on either side. In the naval battle of the Virginia Capes, only one English ship sank. And while Yorktown was one of a very few battles America won during the revolution, it was enough to persuade the English that the cost of subduing the colonials and their French allies was higher than they were prepared to pay. During the war, battles were sometimes suspended because of bad weather and muskets did not fire in the rain. Winning the field was more important than inflicting casualties, and opposing armies often camped close enough to serenade each other at night.

There was still a lot of honor in war then," said Russell Knower, a gray-haired Massachusetts business executive who portrayed a French officer. Why does Mr. Knower spend a few thousand dollars and many cold nights in a canvas tent for several weekends a year playing soldier? The love of history, he said, and the sharp smell of hurnt powder, the chance to carry a brass-handled cane and sport a felt tricorn bat adorned with a tuft of goat hair.

"I do it for the run ration," said a laughing Jane Gladding, who with her daughter was among the 1,000 women and children acting as camp followers. While the men marched off to do mock battle each day, the women remained in camp to conk, sew and answer questions from visitors.

"I see a lot of people raise their eyebrows when yon tell them you are a camp follower," said Hazel Dickfoss, originally from England, but lately of Racine, Wis. "They think all camp followers were plying the world's oldest profession, but that's not true

At night, the only illumination outside of a half-dozen cook fires was from a thousand candle lamps sparkling among the acres of small white tents. Be-hind Ms. Dickloss, a collection of olf-duty fifers and drummers played "Yankee Doodle Dandy." At another campsite, a circle of soldiers sang "Alouette."

Breaks in the fantasy came occasionally. "Do you know where the French are camping?" asked Alexan-der Cacciola, a 77-year-old patriot from New Hampshire who wandered into the camp. "I've been walking around lost for two hours."

The French president repeatedly praised the spirit and character of the United States. "When they move

Mr. Reagan said in a question and answer session with editors that the shah would not have fallen if the Carter administration had well given him unwavering support "m whatever had to be done to curb the revolution."

The thrust of Mr. Reagan's elaboradon -and of statements by his chief aides in recent days - is that the president was not talking so much about intervening in a do-mestic upheaval in Saudi Arabia as about trying to prevent such an upheaval by a show of U.S. support. Such support, he says, was lacking in Iran in 1978 and 1979 when the shah fell.

Schmidt Returns to Work in Bonn

Sec. Sec.

BONN -- Chancellor Helmut Schmidt returned to work Sunday, one day after he left the hospital, to be chairman at a meeting of his leftliberal coalition government, a government spokesman said.

The chancellor, fitted with a heart pacemaker last Tuesday, presided over discussions oo how to fill a big gap to next year's budget spending

Government sources said new predictions of higher unemployment and lower tax revenue in 1982 would mean a shortfall of 5 billion to 7 billion Deutsche marks ($2.25 billion to $3.15 billion).

Reports Conflict Over Sahara Battle

The Associated Press RABAT — Conflicting reports emerged Sunday on the outcome of a major battle that erupted last week in the six-year-old desert war over the phosphate-rich Western Sahara.

In Morocco, government sources said Moroccan troops had taken the advantage in the fighting at the desert oupost of Guelta Zemmur and had dealt heavy losses to the Polisario, a guerrilla group fighting for control of the former Spanish Sahara. The Polisario, however, claimed its forces had "destroyed" the 2,600-member 4th Moroccan Regiment guarding the desert post. The state-ment was issued from the Polisario headquarters in Algiers, where the government has supported the desert guerrillas since the war began.

Romania to Begin Food Rationing Renters

The ration of bread and flour-based products works out at about 410 grams (14.35 ounces) per person a day and the average allocation of maize, a local staple, will be around 2.5 kilograms (5.5 pounds) a month. These measures, which follow floods and drought earlier this year, come amid reports of growing lines at stores, informal rationing in some parts of the country and occasional work stoppages to protest against food shortages.

New York Times Server PEKING — With a good harvest in sight, China does oot expect to buy any more U.S. grain this year beyond the maximum 9 million tons for which it is eligible under the current agreement, U.S. Secretary of Agriculture John R. France to Send U.S. An Executive as Envoy

By Edward Cody Washington Past Servic

PARIS - France's Socialist government is dispatching as its new ambassador to the United States a man likely to bring sharp changes in the style of French diplomacy in Washington - a nondiplomat reputed to be a homebody who has spent his entire career with the nationalized Renault anto company.

President Francois Mitterrand's choice of Bernard Vernier-Palliez, 63, demonstrates official confidence in an executive who has helped make Renault into Europe's leading automobile manu-facturer and a paradigm that French Socialists point to repeatedly in explaining their reasons for nationalizing more French indus-

It also reflects a desire to underline the difference between Mr. Mitterrand and his predecessor, Wilterrand and his predecessor, Valery Giscard d'Estaing, whose ambassador, Francois de La-boulaye, is, in the carefully chosen words of a French diplomat, "more of a society ambassador" than the party-shy Mr. Vernier-Pallier. Palliez.

Officially, a Foreign Ministry spokesman explained that Mr. Mitterrand picked Mr. Vernier-Palliez because he knows the United States well as a result of business contacts as chief Renault ex-ecutive since 1976 and a steady career with the state-owned company that began in 1942, before it was nationalized.

Called Ideal Advocate

The French press added that Mr. Vernier-Palliez's experience makes him an ideal advocate in Washington of Socialist national-

But a Foreign Ministry source emphasized that Mr. Mitterrand and Claude Cheysson, the minister of external relations, also picked Mr. Vernier-Palliez as a sign of a shift away from "the image of

Mr. de Laboulaye, in contrast, is known as a smooth professional diplomat with equally good family connections. His style and the image of France he represents, a For-eign Ministry official said, made him a likely target for Mr. Mitter-rand and his Socialist government.

Fled Paris Society

As chief executive at Renault, Mr. Vernier-Palliez has fled Paris society with determination. His associates say he enjoys opera in the evening and horseback riding on his days off but shies away from the demands of entertainment and social dinners.

Although his appointment as Renault's top manager had to be approved by the government — Mr. Giscard's at the time — Mr. Vernier-Palliez has never been in-volved in politics, a Renault spokesman reported. Foreign Ministry officials said, bowever, that he knows Mr. Mitterrand and Mr. Cheysson from professional meetings and seminars in which the three participated.

French diplomatic appoint-ments traditionally remain within the professional corps more than in the United States, although ap-pointments outside of what the ministry calls "the career" are not extraordinary. Mr. Vernier-Palliez's appointment, expected to be announced officially after an agreement from Washington, thus aroused little open controversy here.

Russian SS-20 rockets aimed at the MOSCOW - In the first detailed Soviet analysis of French Hinting at Russian fears that policy under Francois Mitterrand Mr. Mitterrand was moving Pravda expressed grave doubts France further into Washington's Sunday over the course followed by the Socialist president in foreign affairs.

A lengthy article by Pravda's ed-itor-in-chief, Viktor K. Afanasiev, who is also an important Communist party official, indicated particular concern over Mr. Mitterrand's views on nuclear weapons in Europe. It was also deeply critical of the French leader's stand on the Afghanistan issue, which Paris has said was an obstacle to normal relations with Moscow.

GRilow, May

Mr. Afanasiev said that despite earlier pledges to work for the dismantling of military blocs, Mr. Mitterrand and Prime Minister Pierre Mauroy now "reject the policy of neutralism and in every way possible stress their allegiance to the Atlantic Alliance."

He criticized them for not condemning U.S. plans to produce the neutron weapon and said Mr. Mitterrand's attitude toward planned deployment of new U.S. medium-range nuclear missiles in Europe had evoked "puzzlement." The French Socialist leaders have been among Washington's strongest supporters over planned deployment of Cruise and Pershing-2 missiles in Europe to counter he said. The article indicated that Moscow felt that its deep reservations about Mr. Mitterrand, hinted at before his election in May, had been fulfilled.

Mr. Afanasiev is a full member of the Central Committee, and his article, the second in a two-part series on France under Mr. Mitterrand, clearly represented Kremlin views. Publication of Sunday's ar-ticle coincided with the departure of Mr. Mitterrand for the United States for a meeting with President Reagan that is expected to underline a joint stand on East-West re lations.

NOBEL PEACE PRIZE WINNER Once again, the forces of evil have struck. Through their cowardly assassingtion of President Anouar B Sadate, they aimed at the assassingtion of the hopes for peace he had succeeded in arousing in the Near East. His death marks the disoppearance of one of those great heads of state who will leave their mark on our century and the history of the world.

While my hapless country—scene of bloody maneuvers of factions lusting for power—is in its last threes under the blows of its executioners, Egypt has become a haven of security for my family, for numerous ironians and for me, as we await our return to our beloved hometand.

Never shell I forget the wolcome we received from President Sadate in March of lost year. In the person of their President, Egypt and her people welcomed us as guests of honor: the red carpet rolled out on our arrival was a symbol; ciready a great Ohief of State, President SADATE became—on that day—quite simply a Great Mon.

My father's last days were brightened by his friendship. His illness, alasi was too for gone for there to be any hope of recovery, but, in his ecceedingly great compassion, God allowed us to find a father's comfort in President SADATE,

The solicitude with which President SADATE surrounded me when it solernly swore to consume the responsibilities to which the ironian Constitution destined me, was for my greatest encouropement to pursue the path traced by my father, my grandfather and by all those who, during past centuries, have guaranteed the continuity of the ironian manarchy.

President SADATE was a man of peoce, of wisdom, a great master. He paid with his life for his political discernment and his will to refuse to yield to influences exercised upon him.

Time to Change Course

It does not matter whether Pat Moynihan or David Stockman invented the phrase. When the New York senator and the White House budget director agree on anything these days, attention should be paid. They agree that nine months after an impressive takeoff, the Reagan administration needs a major "mid-course correction." Indeed.

Reagan is running low on fuel -- the federal revenues needed to reach his governmental destinations. He has veered too far to the right, risking the loss of a favorable political wind. And his national security panel is signaling fog ahead.

The president retains the country's confi-dence and uses it well. He is flexible and shrewdly opportunistic. But will he re-examine his pre-flight premises in time?

Most troubling is the evident miscalculation on revenues. As Moynihan observes, the president ebose to fly blind with a radical theory that buge tax cuts would, almost instantly, pay for themselves. "We would use the increased revenues the federal government would get from this tax decrease," he said, "to rebuild our defense capabilities."

Tax rates were thus enthusiastically reduced. Military commitments were confidently made and the rest of the hudget was painfully cut. But there was no instant recovery - even of expectations. The balanced budget remains a distant dream. So now the White House wants to ditch more social programs and pass others to already burdened states and cities.

One can dispute the size of the shortfall, but not the need for more revenue over the next three years. The most wasteful tax cuts

- for oil refiners, for example - should be rescinded. The most costly tax cuts, on estates and incomes, should be delayed. The least necessary military programs, like the Bl bomber, should be dropped.

That would greatly reduce government borrowing, allow interest rates to fall and provide a real stimulus to depressed industries, notably construction. The tax cuts simply cannot induce prosperity while expensive money retards expansion.

But more than pride hinders the necessary corrections. Uncertain ideology and diplomacy are also getting in the president's way.

Too many in Reagan's circle welcome the revenue shortage. The less money, they figure, the less government; they'd rather be right than airborne. But their shifting of wealth from the middle classes to the well-todo is not the public's understanding of the Reagan mandate. Nor is it really the president's as he belatedly acknowledged in the storm over Social Security.

A further weakness bas been the failure to define the strategic purposes of a rapidly rising military budget. Bureaucratic wars rather than foreign dangers too often explain excessive orders for new bardware. But it was the president who taught that national security, like prosperity, depends above all on a healthy economy. As diplomatic and military choices crowd in, he needs finally to rank his priorities abroad and justify their cost.

The passengers are restive, but not because they can't tighten belts or take the bumps. They mainly ask whether the pilot knows how to get hack on course.

A Question Unanswered

The question raised by the life of Moshe Dayan was whether Israelis can find in themselves the resources of courage and imagination not only to defend their country but also to reach out and live in peace with all their Arab neighbors. Certainly Mr. Dayan, as much as any Israeli since the state's founding, proved they could accomplish the first task. With his signature eye patch, he came to symbolize the Israeli "David's" prowess against the Arab "Goliath." Not even his failure as defense minister to prepare adequately for the Arabs' surprise attack of 1973 - the ultimate tribute: his tactic -- dulled the luster he had won in earlier wars. As a boy Gen. Dayan had lived alongside Arabs; even as Jewisb life in Palestine (later Israel) became more urban and "modern" and concentrated on military confrontation, he kept a deep fascination with the desert and with the Arabs who lived in Palestine, and with the potential of peace. The 1967 war, ending with the West Bank and Gaza in that inevitably arose was not automatically to retreat to more repression but to try sinuous new ways of cooperation. Speaking colloquial Arabic, sipping coffee with Arab friends on the West Bank, be could claim as few Israelis could to bave the respect of the Palestinian Arabs and to know them.

As the years passed, his conviction grew that he and perhaps he alone could lead. Yet the war of 1973, although it perhaps added a desire for personal vindication to his political motivation, had hurt his public standing; and with his loner's style, he had burned his bridges to his old Labor home. He parlayed his personal prestige into a position in Mena-chem Begin's post-1977 Cabinet and as foreign minister made important contributions at Camp David.

But he wanted more, and in the elections earlier this year he tried to fashion for himself a swing man's power. He failed. To his dismay, to Israel's dismay, perhaps even to the dismay of those Arabs who saw in him

After three years of revolution, the Iranian economy might be expected to be near collapse. But those who hope eco-nomic deprivation will cause a mass deseruon from Khomeini in the next few months are in for a disappointment. The regime recognizes that its support rests with the lower economic groups, which can be brought into the streets when nec-essary, and it is doing its best to take care of people's basic needs.

In Iran today, life is very bleak but not yet hopeless. At present, Iran has roughly $4 billion in foreign exchange, $2 billion to $3 billion in gold and a collection of other assets totaling $2 billion to $3 bil-lion. Oil exports have been ranging from 600,000 to 1.1 million barrels a day, which, at $36 a barrel, can provide $10 billion to $14 billion in yearly earnings. A financial grunch could hit Iran next

A financial crunch could hit Iran next year if the war continues and Iran's oil exports cannot increase. The economy is in stark contrast to the booming 1970s when the shah embarked on an industrialization program. Unemployment is 30 percent to 40 percent, but the sharing of goods among closely knit family units and aid from local mosques or from the gov-ernment are easing hardships. The Iranian people have weathered bad times before. In the early 1950s no cil was

Democracy Needs Debate

By James Reston

WASHINGTON - The decisive vote in W the Senate on military weapons for Saudi Arabia has been postponed until near the end of the month. This delay has been arranged in accordance with the first principle of "the greatest deliberative body in the world," which is: If you don't have the votes, don't vote --- deliberate!

It will be interesting to see how this time will be used. The chances are that it will be used for a political wrestling match, during which arms will be twisted and deals will be struck to switch a few votes to President Reagan's side.

This is the way things are usually done in Washington. If you can't persuade them, bribe them.

In this game, the White House has all the advantage. It has the power to offer favors or withhold favors some senators want for themselves or their states on questions that have nothing to do with Saudi Arabia - in exchange for their votes. All administrations do it, and deny it, and the Reagan adminis-tration knows all the cards in the Senate deck, and is no exception.

It is also possible, though highly unlikely, that this time could be used for a really hon-est debate in the Senate, not only about AWACS, Jews and Arabs, but about American foreign policy in general and American Middle East policy in particular. This kind of dialogue is long overdue.

A Mystifying Babble

The Reagan administration has somehow managed to confuse both its supporters and its opponents about what it is doing in the Middle East. One day it announces a new "strategic relationship" with the Israelis, which infuriates the Arabs, The next day it insists on a military deal with Saudi Arabia. which infuriates the Israelis. The president "assures" the Saudis that the United States will not "permit" the monarchy there to be overthrown like the shah of Iran - without consulting the Congress or the Saudis about the wisdom of such a commitment, or bow it could be redeemed. As things now stand, this debate — if that's the right word — is not being con-ducted primarily in the Senate, but on the ATTH Sunday television shows and on political platforms around the country where all ships pass one another in the night. The re-sult is a mystifying babhle of secondary questions. Are you for Reagan, right or wrong? Is American foreign policy to be decided in Washington or in Jerusalem, with the help of the Israeli lobby? Should the Senate, under the Constitution, merely give its "advice" on major foreign policy issues, or de-mand deference to its "consent"? All this is now in contention. Sen. Howard Baker of Tennessee, the majority leader, has scheduled 10 bours of de-bate on the AWACS issue, probably on Oct. 27. If it's left to that, the chances are that this complex issue will be decided by private and prior commitments before it gets to the Senate flonr. There are, however, other options. The debate could be extended for two or three days to give the Reagan administration time and scope to define its Middle East strategy and invite the opposition to respond.

There is nothing in the Constitution or in the rules of the Senate that forbids such a searching debate, in public if advisable, or in private if necessary. The Senate, can, if it chooses, exclude the news media, which it has done before on sensitive military and foreign policy issues. It can invite the secretaries of state and defense to defend their policies before the entire Senate and submit to questions. The Senate is even obliged by law to receive for-mer presidents of the United States to participate in the debate; it would be interesting if Nixon, Ford or Carter appeared, because presidents tend to speak their minds only after they retire.

But the present president and the present Senate, like their predecessors, are not so inclined. They prefer to play "the game," and the rules of the game are well-establish-ed: The business of the government is to govern, and the duty of the opposition is to oppose. The only trouble with these two proposi-tions is that so many members of Congress think their main responsibility is to get reelected, and in the process they confuse their personal interests with the interest of the nation.

All this leaves the American people in a pickle. They cannot possibly know what to do about sending AWACS to Saudi Arabia, or what the Russians are up to in Yemen, Ethiopia, Angola or Namibia, or whether the United States should spend billions on MX missiles, B-1s or Stealth bombers.

What they do have a right to know, how-

WASHINGTON - Richard Nixon was 61 when he left the White House. Gerald Ford was 63. Jimmy Carter was 56.

They had been given unique educations, at public expense, in domesule and foreign af-fairs. They were far from being washed up mentally or physically. But the American system provided no automatic or natural roles for them to play.

roles for them to play. They were, in theory, the titular leaders of their parties. But Nixon was disbarred by his Watergate disgrace and the other two were diminished in influence by their defeats. Besides, in the shapeless cloak of opposition party politics, the "titular lead-er" is not much more than an empty sleeve.

Not since Herbert Hoover was brought back from lengthy retirement by Harry Tru-man to do his useful work as the chairman of the commissions on government reorganization has a former president been given an official role of any real magnitude. So they have busied themselves with writing memoirs, lecturing, building libraries and museums, kibitzing and intervening awkwardly on political and governmental matters. And, like a lot of other retirees, they have time to attend funerals.

Nixon and Ford came ont of retirement to join Carter at Hubert Humphrey's funeral in 1978. Nixon, Ford and Carter joined hands to represent Ronald Reagan and the country at the funeral of Anwar Sadat. The latest disinterment of these premajurely buried treasures produced more than historic photograph - apparently unique in our history — of four presidents at the White House. It produced real news, as Carter and Ford conducted a joint interview en route home from Cairo that suggested an American diplomatic initiative to break the deadlock on the Palestinian issue by opening direct talks with the Palestine Liberation Organization. Since both presidents had renounced, while in office, the very course of action they now found desirable, their views had an understandable shock effect. While Reagan immediately reaffirmed what had been —

Ford-Carter policy, there is a clear sense that options are now open which were previously closed.

Later in the week, Carter and Ford made common cause again in support of Reagan's embattled proposal for sale of AWACS aeri-al-surveillance planes to Saudi Arabia. That made it seem all the more plausible that they were running interference for the successor they had both, at various times, com-peted with for office.

Given all the dramatics of these alumni activities, it is not surprising that some now see a useful role emerging for former presidents: to utter dangerous truths, to say things the country or the world needs to hear but which people in power, or scuvely seeking power, find it impolitic to say.

You can imagine some well-meaning foundation leaping forward to propose an annual "presidents' convocation," where all the former occupants of the Oval Office would gather for a weekend, pool their wisdom on current topics and then issue their pronouncements.

The Itch for Power

That is a notion that ought to be embraced with great wariness — if not actually strangled at birth.

It is not that the former presidents, individually and collectively, are lacking in wis-dom. Far from it. But it needs to be remembered that they were removed from office for what the public thought good reason. Oracles they may be, but the Oracle at Delphi had never lost an election or been run out of town one step ahead of an impeachment jury.

Spain and the Europeans

President Reagan chose the right time to make plain America's support for Spain's troubled democracy. It was momentarily in doubt when Secretary Haig minimized the attempted coup in Madrid last February as an internal matter. Mr. Haig soon made amends, and any remaining doubts should finally be dispelled by Mr. Reagan's welcome to King Juan Carlos, who risked his crown to defend Spain's reborn Parliament.

The monarch is indeed a "champion of demoeracy." But terrorism attracts the Basques, and disgruntled generals still talk as if democracy and even the king were on trial. Much of Mediterranean Europe would feel the tremors if Madrid again fell under military rule. What would lessen the risk would be Spain's adduission to NATO and the European Community - steps that Mr. Reagan properly encouraged.

The divided Spanish Parliament has yet to apply to join the alliance, whose 15 members seem ready to approve. Spain's admission to the Common Market is a thornier matter because its fruit, olives and wine would compete with the subsidized farm products of the rest of Western Europe, notably France.

Spain applied in 1977, with the approval of all its major parties, including the Socialists and the Communists, who oppose joining NATO. The Community, including France, welcomed the application because it promised to strengthen a fledgling democracy. If that was sound reasoning, then the current hints of delay or rejection could drive Spain hack into isolation, and toward distrust of pluralism.

Americans can offer only an advisory opinion. But it doesn't hurt when Mr. Reagan reminds Europe that more is at stake than the price of olive oil or wine. THE NEW YORK TIMES.

A Colorful Figure Is Gone

Moshe Dayan's death robs Israel of its most colorful personality, who potentially still bad greater services to render. Opinions will continue to be divided about this exhibitionist soldier with a political reputation for unpredictability and opportunism. The situation in Iran is sppalling. There doesn't seem to be an end to the atrocities of these ungody "clerics." On the contrary, their taste for blood and destruction is increasing. The recent news of the exe-cution of some 100 schoolchildren is just one more example of bow horrid life in Iran is.

Our politicians and soldiers in exile have difficulty putting aside their selfish differences and building a strong and effective front to put an end to the pres-ent regime. In fact, one wonders whether most of them have any real concern for Iran at all, given the absence of comment on their part, in the world press, as to what they feel about the misery and the mass murders in Iran.

The only Iranian who tirelessly does write to tell the world what the Iran of today is really like is Dr. Honshang Nabawandi. Others should follow his ex-ample. Wednesday, this normally soporific resort will have been taken over 0, 1.500 foreign delegates and over 2,000 journalists. A narrow 14-mile-long island sprinkled with luxurious hotels that at-tend only to the affluent, Cancin seems an unlikely setting for a confer-ence on world poverty. But it offers the informality, seclusion and securi-ty thought necessary to encourage some breakthrough after years of functions negotiations. Such is the informality, in fact, that the leaders of eight industrialized and 14 developing nations will meet in a soundproofed hotel room in Cancin on Thursday morning without an agenda and with no plans for a final communiqué.

But oo such improvisation has been permitted of the organizers of the conference, and the pressure on Mexico to insure a smooth operation has been enormous. The main worry is mevitably security, although Cancún is attached to the mainland by only two bridges and is therefore relatively easy to protect.

During their stay, the visiting group will remain ensconced in the Sheraton Hotel, which will be off-limits to the press and the public. Mexican naval craft will patrol the sea and lagoon oo either side of the hotel. Apart from hundreds of local security agents, most leaders will also bring their own armed bodyguards.

Aware that several of the visitors are in their late 60s and early 70s, the Mexican government has also assigned top specialists in every medical field to Cancuo's small hospital, while a medical evacuation helicopter will stand by at all hours.

Four of the invitees - Chancellor Helmut Schmidt of West Germany, Chancellor Bruno Kreisky of Austria. President João Baptista de Oliveira Figueiredo of Brazil and President Félix Houphouët-Boigny of the Ivory Coast — have already been forced to cancel for health reasons and will be represented by their foreign ministers.

Mr. Kreisky had been scheduled to co-chair the conference with Mexico's president, José López Portillo, and that role is now likely to be taken over by Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau of Canada.

Much of the organization, though, has involved satisfying the personal quirks of many of the leaders. President Ferdinand E. Marcos of the Philippines has sent his own furniture from Manila. Diplomatic sources said that the principal request of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher of Britain was for a hair stylist to be available.

Apart from the opening session, the press will be excluded from all meetings. But to insure good communications for the media, a satellite ground station as well as 1,000 telephones and 300 telex machines have been installed, while the government leaders will have hot lines to their capitals in their suites. · · . .

trolled by economic weight, thus by the rich, industrialized nations. Politics, Not Economics

Cancún, then, is essentially about politics rather than economics, the power of decision-making rather than an appropriate level for the price of coffee. This is hardly surprising. Political leaders are meeting at the newly built Caribbean resort and their economie specialists will be in back rooms or hotel suites. The 14 less industrialized nations (called the South, but mistakenty, since India, Yugoslavia and others lie north of the Equator) hope the gathering will begin the global negotiations that have been stalled for two years at the United Nations. Global negotiation is the short-hand for vesting ultimate decision-making in a United Na-tions-type body where each nation has one vote. The 14 will get help from some of the equally misnamed North. (The Soviet Union, a comparatively rich northern country, has spurned an invitation to Cancún

At the same time, some soft words aboot a global negotiation round by Mr. Reagan should permit the heads of state to leave cootent with a symbolic agreement.

So on Friday, when Cancin's cisions taken at GATT or in the chairmen summarize for the press what has taken place, they are like-ly to hail a signal achievement. It is World Bank and IMF. The global negotiation would then be essennewspapers are still operating without any controls or political guidelines — either from the gov-ernment or the new Mass Media Trust - but they have also done little to test the freedom that has supposedly been preserved for them. Speeches of ministers tend to dominate the front pages and criti-cisms of the government tend to be ignored, especially when they come from black opposition fig-ures such as Bishop Abel Mu-zorewa, the former prime minister.

also likely that there will be less to this than meets the eye.

Behind Cancin lies the theory of an Argentinian economist, Raul Prebisch. As the head of the Econumic Commission for Latin America a generation ago, Mr. Prebisch developed the theory that the world economy is rigged against developing countries, producers largely of raw materials. They sell their coffee, copper, cocoa and the rest in largely com-petitive markets. But they buy generators, autos, earth-moving equipment and other finished goods from a handful of producers with power to fix prices. So, in the thesis, the Third World is perennially sis, the Inite world is perchanged disadvantaged, receiving less and less but paying more and more. The Prebisch theory provides a justification for Third World de-mands for a shift in power relations and "massive transfers of resources" from the rich to the poor. There are at least two problems with this, however. A United Nations body quietly commissioned a distinguished group of economists to examine the key argument — that the terms of trade for the poor worsen over time. The experts con-

The other difficulty is the view being expressed by President Reagan: The argument that development is tied to entrepreneurship, private investment and open markets. Where they function, as in South Korea or Taiwan, growth is rapid, where they are inhibited by cootrols as io Algeria, Tanzania or India, growth is sluggish. Behind the political talk at Cancun, there are a number of economic issues that will be discussed by experts and are the subject of future bargaining, global or otherwise:

· Raw materials. The Third World wants to create a network of cartels to protect and increase the prices of their raw materials. · Trade. The developing countries want tariff preferences for their goods in the markets of the rich. If the U.S. tariff nn autos is 15 percent, India would like to sell its cars in the United States tarifffree. Some preferences have been granted on a few products, but they are offset in part by curbs oo textiles and clothing, important Third World exports. The United States has urged all nations to join GATT, where countries swap reductions in trade barriers. But that would compel India to give up barriers protecting its new industry in return for greater access to the West, a deal New Delhi and others do not want to make.

The United Nations for years bas urged the rich to provide the poor with $7 of every $1,000 of output - seven-tenths of 1 percent of gross national product. The Third World wants the IMF to relax the conditions of its loans and provide a slice of aid by distributing fresh Special Drawing Rights, the in-struments nations use to settle accounts with each other. A balance of confidence.

It is largely due to the confidence shown by our customers that we are able to look back once again on another successful year.

They have confidence in the quality, safety, economy, utility value and durability of our vehicles - and have demonstrated this fact.

They also have confidence in our creativity, and in our ability to develop new answers to problems, even in difficult times. This is something they expect from us - and is a duty we owe them.

On a safe course through difficult times.

The determining factor in the development of the world's economy was once again the drastic increase in oil prices. This fuelled inflation, reduced the chance of growth for those countries dependent on oil imports, and left its mark on their balance of payments.

Despite the overall negative tendencies with regard to turnover in the world-wide automotive industry, 1980 was for Daimler-Benz a year in which our star continued to shine.

We have produced and sold more, improving our market position both at home and abroad. The total figures were 429,078 cars and 272,868 commercial vehicles.

Turnover for the whole concern rose by more than 13 per cent to over 31,000 million D-Marks. Our factories worked to full capacity all year. Jobs remained secure. With almost 9,000 new jobs. Daimler-Benz employed 183,000 people by the end of 1980.

In 1981, so far as we can tell, our company will probably equal last year's performance, perhaps even better it.

Good progress on the road to the future.

In 1980, we continued to press forward towards our targets. These are naturally to make every effort to maintain and improve the high utility value, economy and quality (therefore also the real worth) of our vehicles. This is particularly important at a time when strict standards are being set for vehicles, and for the product policy of the automotive industry.

It was against this background that we introduced the New S-class saloons. These are even more efficient and safe, and retain their value even better than their predecessors, while needing abont 12, per cent less fuel.

Additionally, two new four-cylinder engines were introduced for the 200 and 230 E models which offered enhanced performance while at the same time up to 13 per cent improved economy.

The economical diesel passenger car engine - a classical type for us - continued to be prominent Almost half of all the cars we produced in 1980 were diesel powered.

Our large and varied commercial vehicle range was further extended. New engines were developed for the new generation of heavy trucks. Engines with high performance, excellent efficiency and particularly good fuel consumption characteristics.

Vehicle exports vital to cover oil costs.

Turnover abroad rose during 1980 mainly due to an increase in exports - by nearly 20 per cent to 17,200 million D-Marks.

Success abroad has long been one of our. and the German automotive industry's principle aims.

Nowadays its importance is even more emphasised for the German economy as a whole and for Germany's balance of payments.

> To succeed in future - invest in the future.

Securing its own future is one of the prime tasks for any company.

Which is why we strive so hard to maintain the high technical standards of Mercedes-Benz products, reduce fuel consumption, and at the same time make them more environmentally acceptable.

We will continue to spend more than 1,000 million D-Marks a year on research and development alone. Additionally, we will invest more than 2,000 million D-Marks in new production plants, to improve the flexibility of our production, and in our sales and service organisation.

We would like to thank our customers for the way they remain true to our marque. This puts us under a special obligation. The confidence shown to us in the past has secured our present. It is also something we want to continue to earn in the future.

to the kind of terror campaign that was a factor in inspiring last Feb-ruary's unsuccessful a military coup attempt.

A number of factors appeared to have contributed to a strangely quiet summer in the usually troubled northern provinces, including a sharp decline in popular support for the organization, stepped-up police action against it, uncertainty about France's policy on extra-diting guerrilla suspects and a de-bate within ETA's ranks over what fashioo is lots of bright stripes and a choice between aristos in datoty, shawled and pantalooned Marie Antoinette outfits, or revolutionaries in cropped striped pants and cockade-trimmed hats.

In a tedious repeat of "same tent, ocxt year," the French, who do not seem to be able to get their act together, have thou-sands of fashion pros shutling to the Jardin d'Acclimatation, the children's amusement park in the Bois de Boulogne. During the weekend (the showings con-tinue through Wednesday), 18 collections went down runways turned into everything from fountained gardens of Eden to columned Roman forums.

The most solid shows were at Chloé, Emanuel Ungaro and Montana, with young, spicy stuff coming from Jean-Paul Gauthier, who makes anti-establishment, post-punk elothes. Karl Lagerfeld, for Chloé, delivered imaginative, fantasy clothes while still managing to make his bottom-line customers happy. His bright abstract prints, among the strongest moments of the collection, were taken from the new, "Memphis school" of furniture design, with amusement park influences.

Lagerfeld's signature this sea-son is a 10-inch-deep, whaleboned corselet — inspired, he said, by Manet's "Nana" — that holds his whole look together.

ه المامن المعمل

Uogaro's contribution this time was a combination of bright chintz prints with more austere striped silks. A man with a couture background, Ungaro hrings along with him refined touches such as hlack silk pip-ing, beautiful silk shawls and the soigné look that comes from a long spell with the carriage trade.

Montana's highly theatrical collection, a hectic 80-minote trip around the world, was about as comfortable as a hot-and-cold shnwer. Brown-garbed nuns, clutching big gold crosses and intoning Gregorian chants, followed close on the heels of leather-clad gladiators. Then came Ukrainian peasants, U.S. joggers and foutball teams, Mexican mariachis and Casbah beauties. what Montana meant by that is anybody's guess.

Theatrics aside, the elothes were serious, with Mnotana's strong feeling for big shapes su-perbly delivered. However, his fabrics collection is now being manufactured by an Italian entrepreneur - which means it has been toned down and made more commercial.

Analysts Reaching Consensus That U.S. Is in Recession, but Forecast Relatively Mild Effects

By John M. Berry on Post Servi

WASHINGTON --- The United States economy is in a recession. The housing and automobile industries have been in that economic purgatory for months, and now the effects are spreading under the pressure of continued high interest rates.

The Reagan administration and a number of private forecasters are not yet prepared to agree the slump technically constitutes a recession, but administration economists acknowledge there is great uncertainty about the economy over the next nine months.

Jerry Jordan, a member of the Council of Economic Advisers, declares, "There is no question that the econ-omy will be building strength through next year, but I am not sure where the launching pad is."

That uncertainty contrasts with the administration's mid-July forecast that the economy would take off by the end of this year and expand by a healthy 5.2-percent rate during 1982. But a weaker economy should mean continued declines in the rate of inflation.

The Consumer Price Index rose 10.9 percent in the 12 months ended in August, but producer prices for fin-ished goods were up only 7.9 percent in the same peri-od, an increase 5 percentage points smaller than in the preceding 12-month period. The CPI should soon begin to reflect that slowdown more fully. Recent economic news could not help but stanch the administration's optimism about economic activity, if not about inflation. Industrial production fell 0.8 percent in September, the second monthly drop in a row. A wide range of industries reported output declines. As a consequence, layoffs are increasing. The nation's unemployment rate jumped from 7.3 percent to 7.5 percent last month.

The Commerce Department will release preliminary figures for third-quarter Gross National Product this week, and many observers expect them to show a de-cline, after adjustment for inflation, at an annual rate of between 1 percent and 2 percent. In the second quarter, real output fell at an annual rate of 1.6 percent.

But having two consecutive quarters of declining output, as measured by the GNP numbers, is not the reason for saying a recession is at hand. Many analysis regard the drop in the second quarter largely as a statistical fluke.

The modest decline in the quarter just ended, however, apparently was the real thing. Nevertheless, most forecasters expect the recession to be mild. "The U.S. economy did enter a recession, which I would date in July or August," Kathryn Eickhoff of

Reagan Confirms Recession

WASHINGTON - President Reagan agreed Sunday that the United States is in a slight economic recession, and he said, "I hope a short one,

"I think everyone agrees on this," Mr. Reagan said. It marked the first time Mr. Reagan has confirmed the nation is in a recession.

Townsend-Greenspan, an economic consulting firm, declared at a recent conference in New York. She cited these factors:

• Initial claims for unemployment benefits, which had been running at about 400,000 a week, have climbed to more than 500,000.

· Payroll employment and hours worked both dropped in September.

Industrial output fell in August and September.
 Purchasing agents say the level of new orders for goods is falling. Ms. Eickhoff expects the housing and auto markets to worsen again in the current quarter — auto sales in the first 10 days of October fell 35 percent from the year-earlier period to the lowest level since 1957 for domestic makes. Single-family housing starts are already at the lowest level for the more than two decades in which the figures have been collected.

Economists Walter W. Heller of the University of Minnesota and George L. Perry of the Brookings Institution, in a joint forecast done for the National City Bank of Minneapolis, conclude that "the U.S. economy is now sliding — or being pushed — into recession." "The Federal Reserve's tight monetarist policy, in spite of some letup in recent weeks, has imposed increasingly severe strains on the economy," the two economists say. "For some time, the resulting economic malady was pretty well quarantined. The major victims were autos, housing and the thrift industry. ... But now, the contagion is spreading."

Helen Junz, another Townsend-Greenspan econo-mist, said the U.S. merchandise trade deficit will be running at an annual rate of between $50 billion and $60 billion by the end of 1982, and noted that some predictions place it at $75 billion. A deficit running at a $60-billion annual rate would slice about 1 percentage point off of the growth of real output in the United

Mr. Perry and Mr. Heller, the latter a former chair-man of the Council of Economie Advisers, see no quick pickup. "Until the second-stage 10-percent tax cut takes hold in mid-1982, we foresee continued recession, or at best, sluggishness.

These bearish forecasters discount the impact of the 5-percent cut in personal income tax withholding that took effect Oct. 1.

But even the bears are not looking for a deep recession, principally because there does not seem to be a high level of business inventories that will have to be liquidated. In the past, the swing from accumulation of stocks to liquidation and then back to accumulation greatly deepened the recession phase of the business cycle but also helped spur a vigorous recovery. Without this inventory swing, the recession likely will be much milder, but so will the recovery.

The Heller-Perry forecast sees a sharp drop in activias late as the second quarter of 1982. A recession lasting that long would mean, among other things, that the federal budget deficit for the current fiscal year would be $75 billion instead of the $43-billion target of the administration.

Some forecasters think unemployment will shortly be close to 8 percent.

Many are worried that with a number of major corporations financially hard pressed, an unexpected bankruptcy or two could make matters much worse.

Zapata Is Shifting Its Assets, Looking for Opportunity

By William K. Stevens New York Times Service

HOUSTON - In 1952, George Bush, now vice president of the United States, and J. Hugh Liedtke, now chairman of Pennzoil, were sitting around their offices in the West Texas oil town of Midland, wondering what to name their fledgling drilling business.

They wanted something that would attract attention, something exotic, something that began with A or Z so it would be easy to find in the phone book, Marlon Brando and Anthony Quinn had just made. a hit movie called "Viva Zapata!" So Zapata it became, and the company has been attracting attention ever since. By 1966, when both Mr. Bush and Mr. Liedtke had sold their interests, Zapata had become one of the world's. largest offshore drilling contrac-

Last month Occidental Petroleum offered to buy Zapata for $745 million in stock, but Armand Hammer, Occidental's chairman, withdrew the bid after Zapata rejected it as "grossly inadequate." Mr. Hammer said he had no intention of attempting a hostile takeover. One reason, analysts suggest, may have been that Zapata, prolitable and in a position to line up sizable credit lines, is well equipped to put up a vigorous fight.

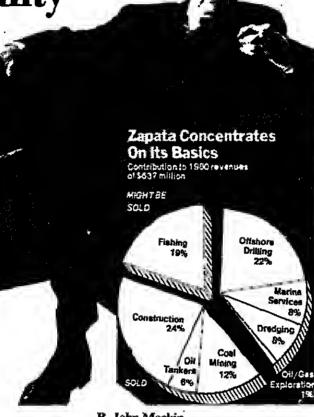

into new businesses but the nature of the businesses selected.

For now, four activities, all related to oil and natural gas, are the core of Zapata's operations. These activities are offshore drilling, marine support services for offshore drilling, dredging and oil and gas exploration and production. Only two activities unrelated to energy emain: A fish-processing operation and a herring and sardine cannery in Maine that is for sale.

With its divestiture program nearly complete, the company's debt has been reduced to about $400 million while the value of its equity has increased to almost the same figure. With 19 mobile rigs scattered around the world, Zapa-ta is the fifth-largest offshore drill-ing contractor in the world,

The company has only recently moved into exploration and production, "We're not a factor in that business yet," Mr. Mackin said, "But we're quite satisfied with our progress in that direction

The corporate restructuring and the biggest oil-drilling boom in U.S. history have had a dramatic impact on Zapata's bottom line. The company's net income in the fiscal year ended Sept. 30, 1980, was $43.6 million, or $2.19 a share, up 103 percent from a year carlier. That gain came on a 21-percent increase in revenue, to a total of $637 million. The return on equity

By the late 1970s, it found itself saddled with a string of weak operations, return on investment as low as I percent and a debt that had soared to $652 million, almost three times the value of the company's equity.

Zapata's turnaround began in 1979, following the forced departure of its chairman, William H. Flynn. The new chairman, B. John Mackin, set out to return the company to its base in the oil business by getting rid of unrelated opera-

Mr. Mackin said phase two will be the acquisition of new business-es to reduce the cyclical nature of Zapata's carnings. His immediate concern is that the current brisk pace of oil rig construction will mean an oversupply of rigs that will lead to a shump in the drilling business by the end of vert year. Iran had been unable to pump ril to its main loading terminal at Kharg island in the Gulf since the raid on Sept. 30 on the vital Gurreh pumping station, the Nicosia-based oil newsletter said. emphasis on fighting memploy-ment rather than inflation. With France now having won its point, bankers argue that it would be a mistake for the government to go on insisting that its lending terms be maintained in future operations. A total failure - which they say was perilously close in the EDF operation - would be a worse embarrassment than acknowledging that conditions in the Euromarket as well as in France have changed.

Gold-Backed Dollars: Where to Invest Them

By Kenneth B. Noble-New York Times Service.

NEW YORK - You have a hunch that the Reagan administration will return to the gold standard. You might be in a tiny minority, but as an investor, you know that big rewards, not to mention big losses, can go to those who put their money where their hunches are, So, allowing for your stout-hearted disposition and your belief that the United States will switch to gold, where should you put your money? Above all, you bet against inflation. Under a gold-based system, the government would agree to exchange a specified amount of gold for dollars at a fixed price. This linkage, say the proponents of a gold standard, would bring risid discipline to the money supply by discouraging the government from printing ever more dollars to pay ever-rising debts. In time, inflation and interest rates would plunge gold and then stabilize.

Whether gold: enthusiasts will eventually prevail depends largely on the pre sident, who can start the process by reopening the "gold window" for foreign central banks through an executive order. (Congress, however, would have to enact legislation to return the country to the gold standard.)

Mr. Reagan, who as a candidate urged reinstitution of the gold standard but who has been less vocal on the issue since, appointed a commission in August to study some way of linking gold to the dollar. He has indicated that he would wait for its findings - due by March. 1982 - before taking any action

The gold standard was suspended in the United States in 1933, mainly because of worldwide de-pression. In 1944, gold was pegged to the dollar and the dollar to other currencies, with the United States pledging to exchange gold for dollars with foreign central banks at the so-called gold win-dow. Then in 1971, President Nixon, faced with persistent demands by foreign central banks, shut the gold window.

Investment Key

The key to investing in anticipation of a gold standard is to find investments that will flourish as the economy deflates. "What the market has been doing for the past few years is buying inflationary. hedge stocks - assets in the ground, trees, real estate, and so on," said James Balog, senior executive vice president of Dread Burnham Lambert, "With a return to the gold standard, one would look for the things that were hurt. in the process of inflation, and the thing that stands out is longerterm bonds."

So, assuming that reinstituting Economic Community, collectively the gold standard succeeds in the largest consumer, remained dicurbing inflation; and short-term vided on the scale of the increase.

interest rates return to their roughly equivalent historical correlation ith inflation -- requiring a drop drop in long-term bond yields and a rebound in their prices.

"If in the future you could get 13 percent, tax-free yield, then that's like 26 percent after taxes, and long-term bonds would be outstanding values," explained David Dreman, managing director of Dreman, Gray & King, an investment counseling concern. "I would certainly go out and buy some at these prices."

State Street Street The outlook for stocks, however, might oot be so promising. If the money supply were defined by a fixed amount of gold, and deflation resulted, corporate earnings could tumble, and stock prices could follow. But most gold standard advocates reject this scenario. They believe that a return to the gold standard would generate more private savings and invest-ment, and ultimately lift equity Drices.

Either way, if the gold standard came back, Mr. Balog would rec-ommend pure growth stocks — "stocks where the actual volume of output is growing as opposed to the price." High technology com-panies would be very attractive, he said. He is also optimistic about interest-sensitive concerns such as banks and the oew financial service conglomerates. wealthy investor. "I would say that stocks as those of drug companies, other currencies would tend to be utilities and food concerns. And overvalued so there would be realignments where an investor could make money by shorting other currencies and buying the U.S. dollar long," he said. Investments to avoid in a deflationary environment would be those tangibles that were collected as inflation hedges in recent years -from real estate to fine art. With an outlook for lower inflation, or even declines in the price of some goods, investment in all tangible ssets might be reconsidered. The rule of thumb for an investor, assuming less inflation in the future, is that anything tangible is overvalued, and that includes oil properties and real estate, particu-larly in speculative areas like Cali-fornia," said David M. Jones, an economist for Aubrey G. Lanston & Co. He, too, would favor bank He also sees potential plays in & Co. He, too, would favor bank the currency markets for the stocks, and such recession-proof

"A good idea would be to put your money in bank stocks or any other lending-institution stocks," Mr. Jones said, "because suddenly they will find profits after being se-verely impaired by excessive inflation, monetary expansion and the sort of conditions that serve as the opposite of the gold standard. Any opposite of the gold standard. Any institution that is essentially bor-rowing short and lending slightly longer would benefit greatly. To put it another way, the lender would now benefit relative to the buyer.

Traders' Reactions

Until President Nixon closed the gold window, the Treasury's official price was $35 an ounce. Three years later, the right of Americans to own gold, suspended since the 1930s, was restored. then, world market prices Since have fluctuated wildly, reaching their peak of $850 in January, 1980. Gold now trades for about $450 an ounce. An administration announcement that the gold standard would be restored would likely lift the volume of trading in gold. As the theory goes, the market price at which gold ultimately settles would be used as the benchmark for the final fixing of the official price. After that, there would be little point in trading, say gold ad-vocates, because, at a fixed price, gold could lose its speculative ap-

For the estimated 5 million to 10 million Americans who hold gold coins or bullion, the official price would be crucial. Some gold standard proponents have suggested that a price between $200 and $300 an ounce might be plausible.

Others, such as Charles Stahl, publisher of Green's Commodity Market Comments, a gold journal, are more skeptical. "If the United States announced today that we are going on a gold standard six months from today, the price of gold will shoot up - I'm willing to bet it will surpass by far the crazy high of $850 in January of 1980," a function no doubt of the speculative element that the warrants offer on minimal cash outlay.

BFCE's coupon of 16 percent compares favorably with the 16.6 percent General Motors Acceptance Corp. paid for three-year money, and while British Columbia Hydro is offering 16% percent for seven-year money, that issue is moving very slowly.

The GMAC issue, priced at 99% bearing a coupon of 16½ percent, was increased from $150 million to $225 million and finally to $300 million. Dealers said that this was about $25 million too much for the market to bear as the paper ended the week at 98% bid-99 offered.

BC Hydro's $100 million of seven-year bonds, guaranteed by British Columbia, was prepriced at par in the euphoria prevailing before Mr. Kaufman's comments and suffered subsequently. Estimates in the marketplace put subscription for the issue at about $20 million, but lead manager Deutsche Bank said that such comments were nonsense as demand from its own clients exceeded that amount. BC Hydro ended the week quoted on a when-issued basis at 98%. A $75-million issue for Ireland was another victim of the Kauf-being introduced by Orion Royal Bank for Oesterreichische Kontrollbank, which is selling $100 million of five-year floating-rate deposit ootes - combining the features of a six-month certificate of deposit with a five-year floatingrate note. Investors are offered the option of requiring OKB to repurchase the notes at par at the end of each six-mooth interest payment period and OKB reserves the right to resell such ootes if it can. It also intends to issue a further $100 millioo of such notes, but the timing of that remains unspecified. The notes, guaranteed by Aus-tria, are intended for institutional investors, with minimum denominations set at $1 million. The rate markets worldwide. of interest will be set at a quarterpoint below the bid rate for sixmonth Eurodollars.

6-Month CD Rates

Traditionally, interest on floating-rate notes are set at a quarterpoint over the offered rate, or, for top banks, at the bid rate. (Generally, there is an eighth of a point difference between bid and offered rates.)

The object of the OKB transaction is to sell five years' worth of six-month paper at a rate of inter-est comparable to what top banks pay for six-month certificates of deposit. Top U.S. banks sell six-month CDs at about a half-point below the six-month bid rate.

Orion, in conjunction with Enropean Banking and Manufacturers Hanover, are not underwriting the transaction but will endeavor to place the notes as dealer-mana gers. While the coupon will be set at a quarter-point below the bid rate, the selling price remains to be negotiated

Thus, the notes could be sold at a discount so that the effective yield to investors was equal to the six-month bid rate, for example. It remains for OKB to decide at what price it sells the paper depending on the advice of the dealer-managers. The expectation is that as a credible secondary market for these listed notes develops, OKB will be able to sell paper at a quarter-point below the bid rate, but that until that happens it will be forced to offer slightly sweeter terms to develop the market.

Mexican Bank Issue

Meanwhile, Oesterreichische Volksbank is offering $25 million of classic FRNs with the interest on the eight-year notes set at a quarter-point over the six-month offered rate. It guarantees a mini-mum coupon of 514 percent.

ARIG-bringing a new capability to international reinsurance

The official launch of Arab Insurance Group (B.S.C.) in Manama, Bahrain, on 17th October, marks a major development in the international reinsurance industry.

The formation of ARIG is the result of Arab business tradition and entrepreneurial skills. It is a significant event in the commercial history of the Arabian Gulf region and a logical step in the full development of Arab financial interests. At present we are writing treaty and facultative business with international reinsurance and insurance organisations. In the future, we envisage taking a more active role in writing different classes of insurance through an international network of representation.

ARIG based in Bahrain, has an authorised capital of US$3.000 million of which US$150 million is paid up. ARIG is bound to bring a new dimension to the industry, not only in the Middle East, but throughout the world. For further information and a copy of the ARIG brochure, please contact: Arab Insurance Group (B.S.C.). Reviewed by Kenneth Friedenreich Where professional historians might rightly contest some of Wil-liams' generalizations, the casual reader, for whom this work seems intend-ed, benefits. The book's strength is its sweep of narrative. We see the United States born of war in the earliest colo-nial skirmishes with Indians. Williams alternates descriptive chapters be-tween causes and campaigns, vindicating a thesis inspired by the military genius Karl von Clauswitz: "War is not merely a political act, but also a real political instrument, a continuation of policy carried out hy other means. We follow American settlers and their successors as they are weated from European notions of war by harsh encounters with natives. Williams describes how our forebears exuams describes how our forebears et-hibited audacity as often as bravery in battle, how they pragmatically solved problems of factics and how they pro-duced everything required for war, from provisions to pistols to para-troopers. Nowhere does this stamina tell more than in the character of the tell more than in the chapters on the Civil War.

War Extends Policy

This is a worthy book. Inevitably, though, amid the body counts and strategy, war loses its human face. For that face, we must look to poets. Moreover, the most disturbing aspect of this history emerges from its thesis, Many American triumphs at war occur despite its leaders' and people's ignorance that war extends policy to meet political objectives. Such igno-rance may mean little to a nation young, virile, inventive. But what happens when the growth curves of American population and resource begin to level off, even decline? Surely Williams should have grappled with the question in his discussions of the Second World War, the Korean War and the Vietnam horror, Instead, we must do so.

Karpov could not have found much point in refusing the offer since 31 ... R-Q1; 32 RxQ, RxR; 33 R-R6, R-Q1 (he must defend against White's threat to double rooks on the eighth rank); 34 RxP, P-Q6; 35 R-Q1, P-Q7; 36 R-R5 would have been equal.

Earlier, both players followed their fifth game up to 13 PxP, when Karpov diverged from his previous 13 ... PxP with 13 ... B-N2!? On 14 PxP, P-Q5!, Black would have had a strong attack, so Korchnoi declined the gambit.

his second, grandmaster Michael Stean of Britain. Saturday was the third anniversary of the final game of their previous match in Bagnio City, the Philippines, the game that enabled Karpov. 30, to retain the champion-

In that 1978 game, the 32d of the title series, Korehnoi had gambled on a surprise Pirc Defense that had back-fired and led to his defeat. His advisers had not wanted him to play aggressively because they felt that Karpov was exhausted and would have collapsed against safe play in a few more games. But Korchnoi is rarely able to play anything safe and he could not hold himself back from the adventure that ruined him. Stean has said, "Viktor cannot play for a draw — he's too pugnacious."

He was at a very favorable point of the 1978 match, for Karpov, after es-tablishing a 5-to-2 lead, dropped three games in a row with poor end-game performances. The momentum, the morale, everything was going for the challenger - except his patience.

Karpov refused to allow these pawns to become blocked on light pawns to become blocked on light squares with 19... The main question is why Korchnoi did not play 21 P-K4!?, defending this pawn so that he could go after the Black QBP. Both Stean and Lubomir Kavalek, an American grandmaster, agreed that this would have been powerful for White. Mikhail Tal, Karpov's second, nodded assent, commenting that Karpov's best defense would then have been to protect his QP hy 21 ... R-Q1.

After Korchnoi's alternative, 21 BxB, RxB, 22 PxP, PxP, he still held a slight advantage in possible play against the isolated QP, but it turned out to be insufficient to win.

The eighth game will be played Monday. 01981. The New York Times.

Happy as he and Piquet were at day's end, equally as pleased must have been the Caesars Palacae hierarchy who created this race on 75 acres - balf parking lot, balf vacant lot - out behind the gambling casino next to the Las Vegas

Only one accident - Patrick Tambay went too wide on a sweep-ing turn and slid into a concrete barrier — marred the l bour 44.09-minute race. Tambay's Talbot Ligier broke apart, and the French driver limped off with a bruised leg and elbow.

The race within a race between Piquet, Reutemann and Jacques Laffite of France for the world championship was tense through the early part of the 75 laps. Rentemann, who started one point ahead of Piquet and six ahead of Latite, apparently missed a shift at the start and dropped quickly back to seventh position after starting from the pole. But Piquet was eighth and Laffite even farther Reutemann, apparently without Reutemann, apparently without a fourth gear, was passed by Pi-quet on the 17th lap. The Argen-tine veteran, in his 12th year as a Grand Prix driver, continued to drop slowly back until, on lap 50 he was lapped by Jones. The moment was savored by the stocky Australian. Relations have been strained between the Williams teammates since the second race of the 15-race series, in Brazil, where Reutemann ignored orders to move aside and let Jones, then the oints leader.

Language The Beauty Part

By William Safire

1 5

2.1

NEW YORK - A confusing new word is smarming itself into the language, corrupting fash-ion pages and curdling the milk of human kindness in the hearts of wordsmen

The word is creme. Estée Laud-er offers "European Bust Conditioning Creme," Germaine Monteil advertises "Super-Moist Line-Stop Creme," aod Chanel presents "Milk Batb 100 Batb Creme."

As gently ap-plied in those creme 今 Safire "cream," means an English word Safire that is probably Safire akin to the Latin chrisma, an unction for anointing.

Why not, then, say "cream"? Be-cause the French word for "cream" is creme, and the use of the French spelling adds a little ro-mance and pizazz.

Why not, then, spell the word the French way — "creme," with an accent grave over the first "e"? Some French firms, such as Car-

Some French firms, such as Car-ita, reject not only the spelling but the idea of cream, preferring liq-mids; but at Chanel, Catherine D'Alessio, the firm's president, ob-serves smoothly: "When a prod-uct's French name includes the word creme — 'Creme Douce,' for example — Chanel uses the appro-priate accent. But since creme is a priate accent. But since creme is a word that the cosmetics industry has borrowed from the French and Americanized, we don't feel there is any oeed to put the accent oo o product's English oame."

Arlene Ritz, Estée Lauder's spokeswoman, asserts; "The deci-sion to drop the accent from "creme' in our advertising was made by Mrs. Lauder herself. She wanted it dropped to indicate that the creme was for facial use rather than something to eat, Dropping the accent was then extended to include treatment products as well as facial products. Additionally, it connotes a sense of luxury."

Ah, now we're getting deep down past the dead-cell layers to lavish on the essentially moist truth of it all. "Cream" needed toning up, and creme was too to-ney. The cosmeticians wanted a word that sounded like "cream" and looked like creme - simultaneously familiar and ritzy.

One reason that Estèe Lander and the others have deaccented "creme" is, I suspect, to introduce confusion into the word's pronunciation. The way to pronounce the French word creme is "krem," but the way to pronounce the nonword creme is "kreem" — unless you feel like pronouncing it "krem," in violation of both English and French rules of pronunciation. Here's the beauty part: The cosmeticians have it both ways. Sophisticated customers read "creme," think of the French "krem," and say either "kreem" or "krem": Rosie O'Grady reads "creme," think "cream" and say "kreem."

* * *

Granted, there is a tendency in English to drop discriminating accents — those grave or aigu marks that point the way to pronounce a letter in French. The Saturday matinee has dropped its accent and retained its long "a." David Guralnik at Webster's New World Dictionary reports that divorcée is becoming "divorcee," and née has become "nee," though both are procounced with the original long "a" (nee, née nay). For a word crossing into another language, dropping an accent is oo big deal - unless the result is confusion, and then it is a big deal indeed.

Cookbooks remain true to prop-er French: Crème Sénégalaise and crème brulée carry that delicious little accent over the first "e," and the reader is thus directed to pro-nounce it "krem." Elizabeth Pearce at Gourmet magazine says, "Our policy is to print all accents."

The merchants of youth have produced a word that is neither French — for without the accent grave, the word is oot French oor English, which already has the word spelled another way. "Creme" is an abomination, "Creme" is an abomination, conceived in pretension, sired in affectation, borne with lifted pinkie, and brought up to be deliberately ambiguous. Without getting emulsional about it, I think we ought to give "creme" o rinse, If we do oot hold the line against sagging standards, what sagging will follow? We have what sagging will follow? We have nothing to smear but smear itself: 'Hoi pollol, honest and forthright, will plunge their fingers into the simple English "cream," while the correct accent grave will be de ri-gueur for the creme de la creme. New York Times Service 'We have to . . . deal with the harsh realities of life again' By Jura Koncius

Washington Past Service Washington Past Service WASHINGTON— "I don't like Mon-days. I've never liked them," said Metro subway general manager Richard Page. "I enjoy my weekends, but after I watch Masterpiece Theatre on Sunday night, I'm just not quite prepared for Monday morning" morning."

"I seem to wear brighter colors on Mondays, like red or bright green," said Nancy Reynolds, Bendix Corp. vice president and former assistant press secretary for Ronald Reagan when he was governor of California. "I also try to schedule a Monday lunch with

"I also by to schedule a Monday lunch with somebody special." "I'm not a Monday person. I don't func-tion well on Mondays," said Kay Waters, an administrative officer at the Environmental Protection Agency, who tries never to sched-ule important meetings or racquetball games on the first day of the week. It's called the Monday blues, a range of feelings and moods commonly associated feelings and moods commonly associated with the first day of work or school. A dip in with the first day of work of school. A cap in energy, mild depression, anxiety about work piling up, guilt for weekend excesses, or just an annable regret at leaving behind the free-floating habits of a weekend for the routine of a weekday — in these and other forms Monday blues take their toll on many people.

Psychiatrists and psychoanalysts acknowl-edge that the Monday blues phenomenon is a common complaint, although they often dismiss it as part of the normal ups and down of life as opposed to a clinical depression. "It may be a legitimate problem," said Dr. Robert Hinschfeld, chief of the Center for Studies of Affected Disorders at the National Institute of Mental Health, "but it gets into the province of life experiences we all have to deal with."

Memories of Childhood

Dr. Henry Krystal, professor of psychiatry at Michigan State University, thinks Mon-days are difficult for many people, some of whom may be remembering Mondays of their childhood.

"After a weekend together, we have to go off again, discipline ourselves, and deal with the harsh realities of life again," he said. "Sunday night is a bad night for many people. They can't sleep as well and Monday may be a particularly difficult day. Obvious-may be a particularly difficult day. Obvious-ly, folklore tells us that it is common enough for people to have noticed it long ago." According to Dr. Frederick Goodwin, chief of clinical psychobiology at the NIMH, "People [on weekends] do indulge in some of the pbysiologically disrupting habits that they are more controlled about during the would ask is if I am happy in my job. Only if I draw a blank on that would I think about biological rhythms." Goodwin suggested that if a person really wants to do something about recurring blues on Monday, they put themselves on a week-end schedule similar to their regular regimen. "In general," he said, "for people who have some instability of their biological rhythm systems, regularity of schedule is better than

Medical Studies

Doctors say it's tough to come up with a biological explanation for why Monday is more of a problem for some people than any other day, although there are recent medical studies that offer intriguing theories.

One long-term Canadian study, for example, reported that an excess proportion of sudden cardiac deaths occurred on Mondays for men with no previous clinical evidence of the type of heart disease that prevents blood from pumping through the heart.

In an article last fall in the Journal of the American Medical Association, a team head-ed by Dr. Simon Rabkin revealed the results of their testing of 3,983 men for a 29-year observatioo period. The researchers com-mented that since psychological stress has been related to sudden cardiac death, return to work on Mondays may serve as the stres-SOT in some cases.

Approach to Biological Explanation

The work of Dr. Elliot Weitzman, director of the Sleep-Wake Disorder Center at New York's Montefiore Hospital Medical Center, comes closest to offering a biological expla-nation to blue Mondays. Weitzman's work is based on a series of tests done in isolation chambers where volunteers, having no idea what time it is — no windows, clocks, or tim-ing systems — decide when they will sleep and wake.

"The great majority of people," Weitzman said, "instead of sleeping and waking on a 24-hour basis will sleep and wake on a 25-hour basis. That is, they will go to sleep an hour later and get up an hour later, establish-ing a 25-hour day ing a 25-hour day.

"These people are adapting to an environ-ment where there is nothing structuring their time . . . That means that every day we must hold ourselves to a 24-boar day because the body would normally go to 25. Every weekend is escaping from this," Weitzman said. "You don't have to get to work Sunday said. "You don't have to get to work Sunday or Saturday morning, so people get up later and go to bed later." By adopting this free running rhythm, and delaying sleep, by Mon-day the biological clock system has shifted so that "you have to get up at 7 . . . but you'd rather sleep until 9:30. "So Monday morning it's hard to get up, you feel sleepy, you don't feel like breakfast. The whole thing is negative... This doesn't explain everybody's feelings on Mon-day morning." If Monday blues hits you on an occasional Monday, "it's a oormal pro-cess," Weitzman said. "It just takes a day or two to recover from it." two to recover from it."

two to recover from it." Some people take a day or two to prepare for Mondays. "Saturday night 1 start think-ing, 'Oh God, there is only one day left be-fore Monday,' " said Wade Warner of Pep-co. "On Monday, I get on the bus, I look at the people, people look disappointed, stern-faced, not eager to get back to the office." Nancy Reynolds loves her job at Bendix, "But the one thing I hate about Monday is if I'm up late," she said. "Tim a compulsive reader and sometimes Sunday night I stay up until 2 a.m. reading journals, papers, maga-zines, novels, cookbooks ... Also Monday I know I must cut down on calories. It's the day to get my head back to where it belongs, a day for first salads ... I mostly look for-ward to Monday, I just don't hit the ground running, which I do on other days." College students are notorious Monday-

College students are notorious Mouday-haters. "I conquer the Monday morning blues," said Pete Bielaki, o senior at the Uni-versity of Maryland. "I sleep in until 10 or 11 on Monday. That way I can recuperate from the watered schedule Acad I surged all mornthe weekend schedule. And I avoid all morn-ing classes."

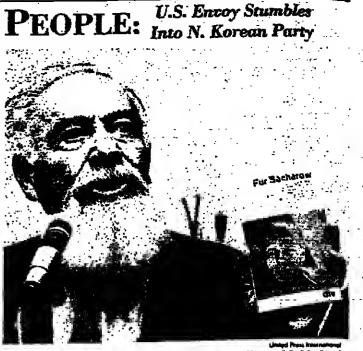

Not for Everybody

Monday blues isn't for everyone. There are those who look forward to Mondays, albeit for differing reasons. "Some individuals may feel better on Monday if they are getting away from an unhappy home life," said Goodwin of the NIMH.

Then there are those who just plain love their jobs and start a new work week full of renewed energy.

"Monday is a good day here because evcrybody in our office relishes their work," said Muffy Brandon, White House social secretary. "It's an up day after the weekend and we are all refreshed."

District of Columbia City Council Chair-man Arrington Dixon said, "Monday we come in more firred up than any day since it is the day leading into our Tuesday legisla-tive meeting . . . I don't know if legislative biorhythms are different. There's no blue Monday for us. It's a firry Monday and a citzling Tuesday." sizzling Tuesday."

Lev Kopeley, shown at the Frankfurt Book Fair with his book "To Sakharov," received the Association of West German Book Dealers' peace prize Sunday. Kopeley, who was stripped of his Soviet citizenship this year, lives in West Germany. The prize carries an award of 25,000 Deutschemarks (about $11,300).
